Definitions & method

- Acquired: paid-ad lead (Meta UTM) whose company is a signed installer (status active); prospects/tests excluded. 221 leads matched by company + name, generic-word matches removed by hand.
- Still active: signed installer not offboarded (is_active).
- Credited month: when the ad lead arrived (not account create date).
- Chargeable survey: stage Survey Done, Booked or Not Completed (cancelled / no-place / refunded excluded), from the slots table, priced at each installer's real rate.
- Net profit: (revenue – ad spend) × 30% margin. Spend = Meta Ads API, 1 Jan – 5 Jun 2026.

Counter view: 86 installers signed without any ad spend and have taken 437 chargeable surveys worth £83,620. With no acquisition cost to net off, that is £25.1K profit at a 30% margin. Organic is the larger and cheaper channel by volume; paid ads add acquisitions on top of it. No month-by-month split is shown here because organic installers have no ad-lead date and their account create dates are unreliable (bulk import).

Paid ads vs organic

METRIC	PAID ADS	ORGANIC	COMBINED
Ad spend	£10,879	£0	£10,879
Installers acquired (all-time)	21	86	107

Combined CAQ (£102) = total ad spend ÷ all 107 signed installers, i.e. the true blended cost per installer once organic is included. Organic revenue is lifetime-to-date on the same chargeable basis as paid.

Acquisition cost is £0 by the ad-spend definition; organic isn't truly free (sales/referral effort), it just carries no tracked ad cost.

Read-across

- Organic is the bigger channel: 86 installers vs 21, 437 surveys vs 116, at zero ad cost.
- Paid ads still profitable: they add 21 installers and £3.5K net on top, at £518 each.
- Blended cost per installer is £102 once organic dilutes the ad spend across all 107.
- Combined net at 30% ≈ £28.6K lifetime-to-date, and still rising as booked surveys complete.
- Caveat: "organic" = no tracked ad UTM; some may still have been ad-influenced without a tracked click.
